Mass. native is Green Party's pick for president

Jill Stein says she supports the Occupy movement ◐ Lexington doctor considers herself one of the 99 percent ◐ Funds nonexistent comparatively Massachusetts native Jill Stein will more than likely be the only presidential candidate speaking at next month's Seattle Hempfest.

It's that grassroots effort that Stein said will help her successfully campaign as the Green Party's candidate for president.

"Somehow democracy got lost when the established parties got bought," said Stein, who last week earned the nomination of the young political party. "We are the 99 percent. We live in a nation of one person, one vote and we need to take that democracy back."

Stein, a 61-year-old doctor from Lexington, told Metro yesterday that she considers herself a member of the 99 percent — a phrase used by those in the Occupy movement to describe themselves and others who are not among the superwealthy establishment.

"I'm certainly the candidate supporting the Occupy movement and I have been from even before I was a candidate," said Stein, who has made appearances at Occupy encampments, including Dewey Square. "I've made it clear, I'm here to support them. I'm not asking for their support. That's not the business of Occupy and I respect their firewall in order to avoid being preyed upon."

"There's a rebellion in full swing out there, and it's really exciting to see it."

JILL STEIN, GREEN PARTY CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT

Some members of the Occupy Boston movement refused to comment on Stein and a message left for their media team was not returned by press time.

The Green Party platform — not just green jobs and climate change — and the issues raised by the Occupy movement do overlap in some areas. Stein said she is concerned with Wall Street involvement in politics, student loan debt and universal, affordable health care.

Don't call it a long shot

While Green Party candidates typically raise far less money than major party candidates and earn a fraction of the votes in national and state elections, Jill Stein isn't considering her campaign already over.

"I think the odds against our campaign are pretty much the odds against the American people," she said. "It's also a long shot to think that students are going to get out of debt … a long shot to think we're going to save the climate."

Stein said the issues that the Green Party has been fighting for are the same as the "majoritarian agenda."

"There's a psychological war out there that we do not have the power and can't win," Stein said. "We can't just sit back and let them decide what our future is."

Mo' money, mo' chance

It takes a lot to win the presidency — a lot of staff, a lot of votes and a lot of money. According to Federal Election Commission filings as of May 31, Republican Mitt Romney has $17 million cash on hand. The filings show President Barack Obama has $109 million cash on hand.

Stein has raised a small fraction comparatively and has about $10,000 cash on hand as of May 31. She has, however, qualified for federal matching funds.

MIT researchers have eyes on bullies online

As if getting picked on at school wasn't bad enough, thanks to technology kids and teens are now subject to the online torture known as cyberbullying.

Startled by the tragic stories in the news about suicides of bullied teens, and statistics that show the issue is growing, researchers at MIT have developed artificial intelligence to help manage the problem.

The Software Agents Group of the MIT Media Lab spent the last year or so working on its TimeOut project, which zeroes in on online bullying.

The goal isn't to catch every instance of cyberbullying, but rather to prevent incidents from escalating.

"It targets possible cases of cyberbullying and also tries to provide targeted education for kids who are in those situations," said Henry Lieberman, a principal research scientist at the MIT Media Lab and head of its Software Agents Group. "We are not trying to directly accuse anyone of being a bully, but we can use a situation as a teaching moment to educate people."

Later this summer the group hopes to deploy software on MTV's Athinline.org, a forum for teenagers to post their problems anonymously and for other teenagers to leave comments giving advice.

The software analyzes the posts, many of which focus on bullying and concerns about sex, and uses an algorithm to identify certain groups of words within a post that could indicate possible harassment.

"Very often with bullying, kids don't know whether situations are normal or they think it must be their fault somehow — and when kids internalize, that's when you get problematic situations that lead to things like suicide," Lieberman said.

The developers said they hope the software helps eventually lead to better discussion between victims, bullies, parents and social network moderators.

"We hope that it will have a positive impact. Of course you can't force anybody to change, but we want to just try to provide educations for kids when these situations arise and hope that their good sense will kick in," Lieberman said.

Droid-using T riders can now say when they see

COURTESY MBTA

Having an already "impressive" response to its See Something, Say Something app for the iPhone, known as See Say, the MBTA this week finally opened the door to Android users.

"About half of our customers are using the Android — so we're really excited to get it out there. We're already seeing a lot of downloads," MBTA Director of Innovation Joshua Robin said yesterday.

The iPhone version has had 2,500 downloads since May.

The smartphone app, which is available for download on the MBTA website, allows riders to discretely send information about a suspicious or dangerous situation, along with a photo, to Transit Police.

"Discretion a huge advantage for us," Robin said. "Something could be happening that's suspicious, and a rider could pull out their phone and use the app, and nobody knows what they're doing. They don't have to make a call."

A few weeks ago, a 10-year-old girl went missing. Transit Police were notified of the situation via the app, Robin said, and therefore were able to send out alerts to app users. The girl was later located.

"A common way it helps us is to get alerts out," Robin said.

Robin said he expects a solid turnout of downloads for Droid users. "We're getting it out there to a decent number of riders," he said.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
morgan.rousseau@metro.us

Using the app

From the app home screen, riders have two options to contact T police:

- The "Report a Problem" button allows riders to send text or photos directly to Transit Police. To make it more discreet, the camera flash is automatically disabled when photos are taken through the app. When reporting an issue, riders can select station locations and report categories to assist Transit Police.
- The "Call Transit Police" button will connect customers directly to Transit Police if they wish to speak directly to an officer.

Penn State to decide fate of Paterno statue

A decision on whether to remove Penn State University's statue of its late head football coach Joe Paterno will be made in seven to 10 days, a school spokesman said yesterday, amid calls for it to be taken down in the wake of the Jerry Sandusky sex abuse scandal.

The university's board of trustees will decide in that time whether the statue will be taken from Beaver Stadium in State College, Pa., where Penn State plays its football games, spokesman David La Torre said in an e-mail.

Critics have increased calls for the 7-foot statue to be removed following the release last Thursday of a report that criticized Paterno for his role in protecting Sandusky, a former assistant coach who was convicted of sexually abusing ten boys over 15 years.

The report by former FBI chief Louis Freeh said Paterno and other high-ranking Penn State officials covered up Sandusky's abuse for years while demonstrating a callous disregard for the victims.

Paterno was fired by Penn State's board in November, days after Sandusky was arrested for the abuse, and died in January of lung cancer at age 85.

A small plane flew a banner around Penn State's campus on Tuesday that read, "Take the statue down or we will." REUTERS

Con Ed shuts down four reactors at height of heat wave

NEW YORK. Several nuclear plants on the East Coast shut down by early yesterday and New York's Consolidated Edison power company reduced the voltage in parts of Manhattan as the obsessive heat wave stressed the region's power system.

Despite the shutdown of four giant nuclear reactors in New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland and South Carolina, the power systems delivered the juice needed by the regions' homes and businesses to keep air conditioners humming on the projected last day of a brutal heat wave. REUTERS

Panetta, 'We'll stop Iran blocking oil'

WASHINGTON. The United States has the military capacity to defeat any Iranian attempt to shut down sea commerce in the oil-rich Gulf region and will hold Tehran directly responsible for shipping disruptions, Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said yesterday.

"The United States is fully prepared for all contingencies here," Panetta told a Pentagon news conference. "We've invested in capabilities to ensure that the Iranian attempt to close down shipping in the Gulf is something that we are going to be able to defeat, if they make a decision to do that."

Panetta's comments came amid rising tensions in the region over Iran's nuclear program and its threats to close the vital Strait of Hormuz unless the international community revokes sanctions imposed on Iranian oil shipments. REUTERS

AT&T to raise data plan costs

NEW YORK. AT&T Inc. is following bigger rival Verizon Wireless with a new type of family plan that will significantly raise its fees for data services, such as mobile Internet.

Unlike its rival, AT&T said the plan will be an option, rather than a requirement, for new customers. AT&T customers and some Verizon customers upgrading to a new phone will also be able to keep their old plans.

Late in August, AT&T will launch the new offering, which allows customers to buy a single data plan for up to 10 devices and includes unlimited phone calls and text messages. REUTERS

"We heard a very strong blast. The bus was full with people and children. Flesh and blood everywhere," a witness told local TV. WWII shipwreck yields $38 million of silver

Odyssey Marine Exploration Inc., a deep-ocean exploration company, said it recovered about 48 tons of silver from a World War II shipwreck three miles beneath the Atlantic Ocean.

The company retrieved 1,203 silver bars, or about 1.4 million ounces of the metal, from the SS Gairsoppa, a 412-foot British cargo ship that sank after being torpedoed by German U-boat in February 1941, Tampa, Fla.-based Odyssey said today in a statement. The metal, worth $38 million at today's prices, is being held at a secure facility in the U.K.

Odyssey said it recovered about 48 tons of silver from a World War II shipwreck three miles beneath the Atlantic Ocean.

Odyssey said the recovered silver represents about 20 percent of the bullion that may be on board the Gairsoppa, which lies about 300 miles off the coast of Ireland. The operation, the largest and deepest recovery of precious metals from a shipwreck, should be completed in the third quarter, Odyssey said.

"With the shipwreck lying approximately three miles below the surface of the North Atlantic, this was a complex operation," Greg Stemm, Odyssey chief executive officer, said in the statement. "Our success on the Gairsoppa marks the beginning of a new paradigm for Odyssey in which we expect modern shipwreck projects will complement our archaeological shipwreck excavations." BLOOMBERG

THE WORD

Limbaugh has a crazy bone to pick

Rush Limbaugh is like a cat on a diet — it's best to ignore his constant whining and pawing until it's truly impossible to read the paper in peace. Unfortunately, today is one of those days, so you'll have to excuse us as we tune in to his thoughts on "The Dark Knight Rises."

On his Tuesday radio show, Limbaugh laid out an impressive conspiracy theory, even for him: The villain of the latest Batman flick is named Bane, which he believes is a reference to Bain, the venture capital firm presumptive Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney worked for. Take it away, Rush:

"Do you think that it is accidental that the name of the really vicious fire-breathing, four-eyed whatever in this movie is named Bane?" he asked. "A lot of people are going to see the movie — and it's a lot of brain-dead people, entertainment, the pop-culture crowd — and they're going to hear Bane in the movie and they're going to associate Bain. The thought is that when they start paying attention to the campaign later in the year, and Obama and the Democrats keep talking about Bain, Romney and Bain, that these people will think back to the Batman movie.'"

Rush, we're going to excuse the brain-dead comment in the hope that it's a zombie reference — we mindless pop-culture people like our zombies. But we also have to point out that the character of Bane first surfaced in the 1993 comic and also appeared in the 1997 film "Batman & Robin."

Now, as for Heath Ledger's spectacularly, award-winningly deranged Joker? We can't promise there wasn't a little GOP inspiration there.

@Joan_Rivers: Justin Bieber is being sued for $9 million by a woman who says she went deaf at his concert. I'd pay DOUBLE that to not hear him sing again.

A little TMI, Garfield

In other superhero news, "Spider-Man" star Andrew Garfield admits he has developed a particularly destructive way of coping with job stress.

"When I'm working on something very intense — like ['The Amazing Spider-Man'] was very intense to work on, believe it or not, and I'm doing a play at the moment which is very, very intense — whenever I'm not onstage I want to watch reality television," he tells Total Film. "I want to watch, like, 'The Voice' or 'The Bachelor.' Don't be surprised by that — it's the greatest show on TV."

Come together, right now

"One thing I want to say: Obama is trying to take our medical marijuana away over there in California, and he's going to send in federal troops to get our medical marijuana," says the comedian, who credits marijuana with helping her to control her infamous temper. "I'll tell you this Obama: You get my joint when you pry it out of my cold, dead fingers!"

Now, finally, this is something that all of us — from Rush Limbaugh to Spider-Man — can probably agree on: Mr. President, we must keep Roseanne Barr sedated by any means necessary.

ANDREW WALKER/GETTY IMAGES

Entering Season 10, 'Project Runway' can still 'make it work' — even if some contestants can't Project Runway," the reality TV competition for fashion designers, is back and celebrating its 10th anniversary. But even with 125 episodes behind it, the show still has tricks up its meticulously tailored sleeve.

"We had one [challenge] where [the designers] had to make clothes out of candy," Klum reveals, though she is careful to keep the details of other Season 10 challenges a secret. "They loved it. I loved it, too. I love the unconventional challenge when they get to make clothes out of things that are not fabric."

The Lifetime series — originally airing on Bravo for Seasons 1 through 5 — still provides plenty of eye-candy, too, as designers compete to craft the best clothing, culminating in the finalists showing their collections at New York Fashion Week.

"I think people enjoy watching that dream of another person," Klum says. "You fight for them. You root for them. You want them to do well, and you want to see what they can come up with."

But with big dreams come big egos. Klum warns of a scandal involving two cast members leaving the show altogether this season.

"This has never happened to us before," she says. "I think they just couldn't make it work. We always say, 'Make it work, make it work.' They just could not make it work and in the morning they were gone. They literally packed up their bags and ran off in the middle of the night when everyone else was sleeping. We just couldn't believe it."

"I think people enjoy watching that dream of another person. You fight for them. You root for them. You want them to do well, and you want to see what they can come up with." KLUM

Despite the incident, Klum insists "Project Runway" is still about the contestants' work, not the drama.

"Our show is based on talent," Klum says. "It's not based on having characters. There are so many shows out there that just put people on because they look a certain way or they talk a certain way or they're goofy ... or they do a lot for TV. Our show is based on fashion, and I think people appreciate that. I think that's why we have been out for so long."

DANNY FELD

'Sullivan & Son'

COMEDY. A successful Manhattan lawyer throws it all away — er, returns to his hometown of Pittsburgh to take over his dad's bar and reconnect with friends and family. Series premiere, 10 p.m., TBS

'Misfits'

DRAMA. After becoming a cult hit in the States via Hulu, this excellent British sci-fi import about teen delinquents who acquire superpowers — and most definitely don't always use them for the better good — lands on Logo. Season premiere, 10 p.m., Logo

'Duets'

REALITY. Oh, this is still on? Well, yes, but the celebrity mentors and their singing partner contestants only have tonight's finale to get through before it all becomes a footnote on their résumés. Season finale, 8 p.m., ABC ● AMBER RAY

WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Reasons to stay cool in theaters this weekend

1 'The Dark Knight Rises' In the finale to Christopher Nolan's trilogy, leading actor Christian Bale once again plays the stone-cold, shadowy figure known as Batman. This time, however, Bruce Wayne has exiled himself from his past as a hero — that is, until the city needs his protection from a new terrorist leader named Bane (Tom Hardy).

2 'Ice Age: Continental Drift' Ray Romano, Denis Leary and John Leguizamo re-team for the fourth installment of this series, which tracks prehistoric pals as they navigate the ocean with an iceberg for a ship.

3 'The Amazing Spider-Man' The verdict is "yay!" for "500 Days of Summer" director Marc Webb's reboot of the Spidey story, with Andrew Garfield taking up the Silly String and Emma Stone on task as the enchanting Gwen Stacy.

4 'Savages' Oliver Stone directs this tale of two pot-growers who get entangled in risky business when their profitable trade annoys a Mexican drug cartel.

5 'Katy Perry: Part of Me' It isn't easy being Katy Perry, as you will see from this 3-D look at her life on the road.

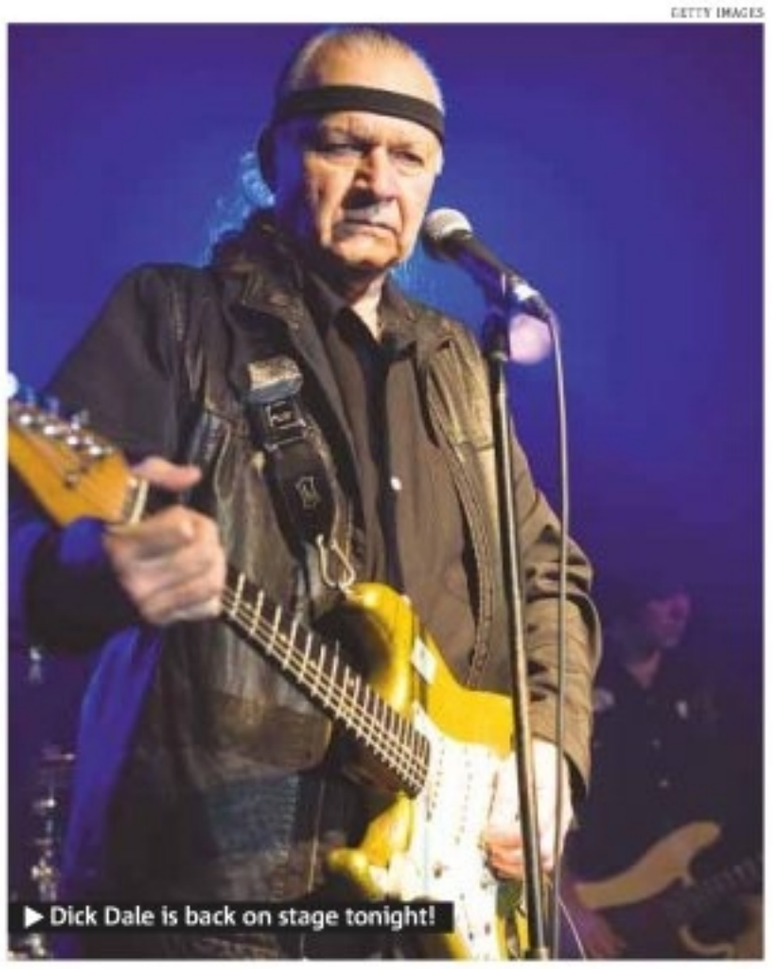
The king of the surf guitar

The man known for creating the genre of rock tied to sunny water sports is a native son of Boston

GETTY IMAGES



Dick Dale is back on stage tonight!

Though it may be hard to believe, Dick Dale, king of the surf guitar, is actually from Massachusetts. As Ed Sullivan would point out to television audiences in 1962, Dale was born in South Boston and raised in Quincy.

"I have many, many fond memories there," notes Dale. "I remember playing 'Silent Night' as an instrumental with my acoustic guitar in the winter at Quincy Point and walking home in the snow."

When his father got a job offer from Howard Hughes in 1954, the family moved to California and Dale began surfing — a hobby that would provide the primary influence for his signature sound. "Gene Cooper's drums and the way he accentuated became my picking style. I went from that to copying the sound of getting caught up in a very big wave," says Dale. "I was also raising lions and tigers and preserving the breeds of the jungle. When they would scream to me to be fed or to come play with them they would go 'Yaoooooo.' I would try to imitate that sound on my guitar. So it was a mixture of everything — Gene Cooper, lions and tigers, and the ocean."

Besides being known as founder of surf rock, Dale is also known reverently as the "father of heavy metal." "In those days the sound was created by an output transformer and they were only 10 or 15 watts and only had 6 to 8 inch speakers," notes Dale. "I started buying these things and they would keep catching on fire because I was pushing the amp, they created a new one. That's when I made the world's ears bleed. Then we got all the people who copied me."

Now 75, Dale is coping with cancer and diabetes. While his health issues have kept him from surfing, they haven't stopped him from touring. Traveling together with his son who plays drums, Dale's wife also joins him on his journey as his nurse. "She's the one keeping me alive," says Dale. "We're on the road to help people going through the same thing that I'm going through and to have a different attitude and forget about our pain by helping other people deal with theirs. So we laugh about it, we swear about it and we say, 'What can we do for you?'"

MTV2

▶ Catch "Guy Code" on MTV2 on Tuesdays at 11 p.m.

One dude's guide to women and dating

Funny man Andrew Schulz has strong opinions on most things — not the least of which includes women and dating. Since he's a talking head on the second season of MTV2's comedy series "Guy Code," we picked Mr. Schulz's brain for a few insights on the male mind.

On a first date, what's a deal-breaker for you?
I wouldn't say there's no room for any antics on a first date — the weirder, the better, because the first date is so weird in general that if somebody does something that creates any stimulus that breaks you out of that, "So, uh, did you study abroad? Oh, tell me about that. Oh, what are your dreams?" Anything weird! Just do something weird — I don't care, fart. You can fart. And I'll be like, "OK, why did you think it was OK to do that in front of me?" You know, create some conversation.

At the end of the date, a guy walks the girl to the train, makes sure she gets home OK —
Wait, hold on, hold on, hold on. If you really wanted to make sure she gets home OK, you wouldn't put her on a subway at 12 o'clock at night. Put a girl in a cab!

Some women say "He was so nice, he walked me to the train," as though that's a sign that a guy likes them. Is it?
I'll be really honest with you. We don't even know that we like you until after we sleep with you.

And why is that?
Because it's not even on our radar if we like you. We're so clouded by the idea of sleeping with you that we can't even focus on these qualities of you that we think we like. "Oh, I really like how she wears red. I really like girls who wear red a lot. And she's probably really smart for knowing that she looks good in red." So we just make up that, and after we sleep with you, we think, "You know what? Red looks awful on you. Why would I even think that I like that?" We have no clue until after. Initially, it's our goal to sleep with you, and it's your goal to sleep with us again. That's your hustle, right? Our anxiety is, "Man, I don't want to f— this up," and your anxiety is, "I don't want to sleep with him and f— this up."

Q&A

How do you feel about the "Jersey Shore" idea of a grenade — a usually unattractive female friend who blocks a man's access to a potential conquest?

I think the guys on that show were having sex with their definition of grenades. From a girl's perspective, I go, "That makes sense. Why would I want my friend to have sex with this random dude on TV and send her home in a cab at 5 in the morning so everyone can judge her?" That's not a grenade, that's a Captain America.

Re: Zimmerman denied fair hearing?

Zimmerman's character is very much a part of this case and his defense. He is basically saying he is a good guy who is part of the neighborhood watch who was caught in up a struggle for his own life so he felt he had no choice but to shoot Trayvon Martin. The molestation charges are relevant as they demonstrate behavior and possible motives for an armed Zimmerman to continue to pursue a minor when told not to by 911 officials and every single shred of common sense. This will and should affect Zimmerman's trial since this goes to Zimmerman's state of mind, character and possible motives. Saying those should be ignored is like saying one's arrest record for violence should not be brought up in any cases involving assault and battery.

DOUG BROWN, VIA E-MAIL

I disagree that the interview with the alleged victim of sexual abuse has nothing to do with his charges. It has everything to do with his credibility, therefore anything that involves Zimmerman's statement of truth to be evaluated with a fine-toothed comb. Funny how the judicial system is to be forgiving of "matter less" evidence when murder has taken the life of not just a family but a society in whole.

SABRINA BROOKS, VIA E-MAIL

Abuse victims act out in other ways

RE: "SANDUSKY: PARENTS SHOULD HAVE KNOWN" I understand why Ms. Verponi couldn't comprehend why children abused by Sandusky or others don't disclose. As a child sexual abuse survivor, I hope I can help. Often, children, like myself, are warned that if we tell they will hurt or kill us. Further, abusers often blame the youngsters. Because the abuse is so personal, and because sexual matters are surrounded by shame, it is very hard to disclose.

Not everyone has understanding parents or other adults to tell. I never thought to tell the police. I always found them scary, and at the time, they were almost all men.

In general, children do tell — but not often in words. We tell by acting out our pain, in addiction, depression, poor grades, etc., until we get the needed help.

It takes a concerted effort by adults and society at large to reach out to young people so that they can speak out and we can stop the abuse and protect them.

SHIFRA FREEWOMAN, BROOKLINE, MASS.

Knicks blew it with Jeremy Lin

Jeremy Lin and the New York Knicks was a match made in heaven. Lin was a charismatic and beloved star who deserved to shine on Broadway. But Knicks owner James Dolan and Jeremy Lin really blew it. Now it's a lose-lose situation, when it easily could have been otherwise. Both will suffer personally and financially. Dolan won't have his shining star to enrich and light up the franchise, and Lin won't have the big city endorsements and love of an adoring fan base. What a tragedy! Both James Dolan and Jeremy Lin are traitors to the cause. Life shouldn't be like this.

Horoscope

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. You might be luckier in things that are done for you by others than through your own actions. Leave the door open, however, for those who see what you're doing and want in.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Being in a particularly good pattern for getting substantial help and reaping copious rewards from ventures or endeavors that you personally manage, you can do much with little.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Timing is your most valuable asset in helping you achieve two important objectives. Don't make any moves until you sense that the iron is hot.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. An idea with which you've been toying looks like it has real merit and can be expanded into something you'll be able to work with. Sound it out on a person you trust.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Although co-workers may be only lukewarm about accepting one of your suggestions, demonstrate your idea and watch how supportive they quickly become. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

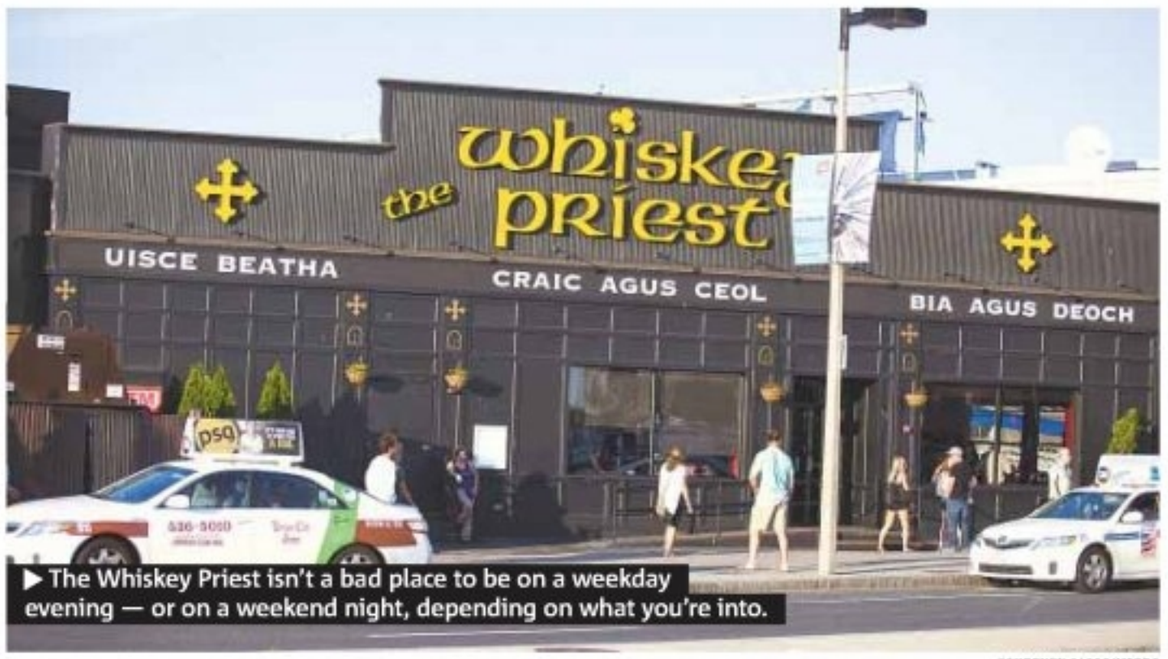
Whiskey a go-go (and a no-no)

The Priest is packed on weekend nights but has a decidedly more mellow vibe during the week



The Whiskey Priest isn't a bad place to be on a weekday evening — or on a weekend night, depending on what you're into.

COURTNEY SACCO/METRO

THURSTY

TWITTER: @LUKEONEIL47

It's a Saturday night and I'm standing in a line that stretches down the block to get into Whiskey Priest. Next door at the Atlantic Beer Garden, there's an even longer line. Sailors from the tall ships in town are taking pictures with lovely young ladies. Bros are bro-ing about bro-ily. It's a pretty standard scene.

"OK, but why?" I think. These are popular nightlife spots, sure, but who would actually stand in a line for a bar?

It's not that I think I'm too good to stand in line, mind you, rather it's that no bar is good enough to stand in line for. Then after roughly the third dozen group of scantily clad girls flip-flop up behind me, I realize the motivation. Oh, right — access to the opposite sex makes us do illogical things all the time, like stand in line for a basic, run-of-the-mill bar.

Inside, it's packed. A cover band is toughing it out through the hits of the '90s, while an army of workers lug boxes of beer around like shell-shocked laborers fortifying a garrison against an invading army of popped collars and sundresses. Waitresses literally shove me aside as they try to get through the throng with trays. This is the worst place I've ever been, I think.

But not wanting to write a bar off on such a packed night, I come back a week later on a Monday. My suspicion is that this isn't such a bad place when it's not crowded.

How bad can a bar be when it boasts some 130 whiskeys on the menu and a nice roof deck overlooking the water?

Turns out it is a tale of two bars here after all. I take my time paging through the whiskeys and sample a flight called "Places to see." In it is Slane Castle, an Irish whiskey that's light and smooth with plenty of caramel; Knappogue Castle, a spicy Irish 12-year whiskey with notes of burnt pear; and a Tyrconnel, tasting of deep-browned citrus. The best part on this quiet night was that there wasn't anyone to bump into me while I sat here looking out over the water drinking pensively. Some of us aren't looking for a drunken hookup or to get in a fight. We're looking for something better: whiskey. You can find all of those things here, depending on when you go.

Whiskey on tap?

The rest of the long whiskey list runs the gamut, from Japanese styles to ryes and bourbons and Scotches, from the moderately priced flights (mine was $15 for three 1-ounce tastes of brands I didn't know, which is great for finding new spirits), to higher-end stuff like a Bruichladdich 33 Islay whiskey for $100. Most of the bottles are "on tap," which seems boorish at first, especially considering the weekend's night club vibe, but it's actually how most liquor is served at bars in Ireland, where the idea of measuring out spirits is still relatively unheard of. Instead, bottles are lined up in what are called Optics dispensers, which measure out the shots.

YES, INDEED

STEVE THORNE/REDFERNS

Guitarist of legendary prog rock pioneers talks inter-band relations, YouTube-ing other guitarists and the inspirational powers of art

Yes have had so many members come and go and return again that it's a wonder they've been able to keep their signature sound for so long. With boldly individual instruments that seem to repel and attract each other at once, they have made a career out of writing epic prog rock songs that just won't work without perfect precision.

Guitarist Steve Howe says the band has been rehearsing one of their longer pieces for the first time in a long while, but he won't disclose which composition it is.

This music that you play requires such precision, it's hard to imagine it being even a little bit sloppy. When you do bring back one of the bigger pieces that you haven't done in a while, how long does it take before you are all in the groove again?

That varies, obviously, because some of us have been playing them since we wrote them and some of us haven't. We respect those who haven't. ... But to learn 25 minutes of music, we've just spent five days doing that — so that's quite a sizable level of commitment.

I imagine that you and bassist Chris Squire are pretty much always in sync, though.

Well, that would be nice. [Laughs] But it's just not that simple. People you've worked with a long time, although you respect them, some of their ways kind of get to you quite a bit. But that happens with all things known to the human race. We don't quite always agree, and sometimes we have to find out which [idea] suits everybody else a bit better. So, you know, we keep on.

Your singer on this tour is named Jon Davison. So not only is his voice similar to your original singer, but his name sounds like Jon Anderson.

It's his real name. Yeah, it's amazing.

And you found him online when he was singing with a Yes tribute band?

Our tour manager Paul Silveira, who is getting proper credit, basically said, "Hey, check this guy out," and he sent us a link. The whole world changed so much since the Internet became what it is today. And of course it would have taken a lot more rallying around, and convincing and meeting and talks and things, [to find and hire a singer]. And instead you click on the Internet, you see a guy. I mean, I do that with guitarists, too.

You're looking for your own replacement?

No. I find it very inspiring to hear and work with and meet other guitarists, young guitarists. Especially if they are quite young guys and they've got talent that I can hear.

Who are you interested in lately?

There's an Italian guitarist I've been doing a bit with. His name is Flavio Sala, and he's just a young 30-year-old guitarist whose actually got the whole classical repertoire under his fingers.

It seems like so many of the Yes songs are inspired by other art. When composing "Starship Trooper," did somebody come in and say, "OK, I've got this idea for a song based on this book, now everybody has to read it"?

Well, that started happening around [the 1973 album] "Tales from Topographic Oceans," really. Jon says, "Hey, I'm reading this book," which was about a yogi kind of guy. But basically I think that arts does inspire music and music inspires the arts. I'm lucky to own a Salvador Dali bronze sculpture called "Surrealistic Angel." Basically, things like that, when you walk into a room, you don't really look at it exactly. I think art inspires art.

  This impressive local band's power pop sound, heavily rooted in the Beach Boys and antecedents like Weezer and the Wondermints, manages to be relentlessly creative without being merely precocious. The music is near-perfectly crafted without the rigidness of pop perfectionism. They may not be real innovators yet — but if they can internalize influences this well, we have no doubts about their potential.

  Formed by Capn' Jazz guitarist Davey von Bohlen in 1995, this band helped lay the groundwork for emo's transition from hard-core punk's redheaded stepchild to the dominant form of alt rock. Theirs was an introverted emo, possessing all the genre's feeling but none of its histrionic, gothic excesses. Few bands have captured the melancholy of late adolescence as well as them.

Summer in the city means embracing all that the season offers, like blue crabs, hippie chic baked goods and harborside noshing.

The pre-punk early 1970s was a time of innocence and idealism and flares and fun! Local 149's '70s Dinner Party celebrates with era dishes like angels and devils on horseback (bacon-wrapped dates and oysters), Swiss cheese fondue, steak Diane, baked Alaska and hemp brownies. (We're sure it wasn't hemp in those brownies of yore, though.) Your ticket includes four '70s-inspired cocktails and lots of 1970s tunes.

Maryland blue crab season is at its peak, and the Blue Room's Blue Crab + Beer Fest lines up an all-you-can-eat spread of Maryland blue crabs, New England steamers, corn on the cob and potatoes served family-picnic style on the Kendall Square patio. Pair it with as much icy local brew from Narragansett Beer, Pretty Things Brewery and Cambridge Brewing Company as you can drink without losing your cool.

Go Harborside for Tavern on the Water and Angel Flight NE's Night for a Flight fundraiser, which includes an open bar as well as unlimited passed appetizers.

At Church's locavore dinner, Chef Jon Gilman teams with Nantucket's Cisco Brewery pairing a heirloom tomato terrine with Grey Lady, an amazingly tasty witbier; Whale's Tale pale ale with seasonal bluefish pate with gooseberry; and littlenecks with pork belly confit, purslane and free-range egg tagliatelle with the bitter-fruity Indie IPA.

New England bounty, bring it on.

JARED WICKERHAM/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Kevin Youkilis has brought a lot to Chicago. The Red Sox, however, have little to show for last month's trade.

Return policy

◗ Lillibridge, Stewart both in the minors as Youkilis tears cover off the ball ◗ But trade still had to be made

There is no doubt Kevin Youkilis has benefitted from the trade that sent him from the Red Sox to the White Sox.

Going into play Wednesday, Youkilis is hitting .319 with four home runs and 18 RBIs in just 18 games with the White Sox. The 18 RBIs are four more than he had in 42 games with the Red Sox.

Youkilis, of course, wasn't just given to the White Sox for free. Boston got two players in return in Brent Lillibridge and Zach Stewart. Unlike Youkilis, however, these players have not flourished with a change of scenery.

Lillibridge originally joined the Red Sox, but was sent down to Pawtucket earlier this week, joining Stewart to make room for the return of Carl Crawford.

In 10 games with the Red Sox, the utility man was just 2-for-16 and Pedro Ciriaco's impressive play made it difficult to find a spot for Lillibridge in the lineup.

Stewart, meanwhile, was sent directly to Pawtucket and has made four starts with the PawSox. The right-hander is 1-1 with a 3.74 ERA and the 25-year-old does have some upside, as he was the Blue Jays top prospect just a few years ago.

Hindsight is 20/20

Obviously the White Sox are the ones that have made out the best in the trade thus far and it certainly raises the question of whether or not the Red Sox could have gotten more for Youkilis?

The answer to that questions is yes, but not at the time.

At the time of the trade, Youkilis was hitting just .233 with four home runs in 42 games, while Will Middlebrooks was in the midst of a tear, hitting .316 with six home runs in the month of May.

2 Brent Lillibridge had just two hits in 10 games with the Red Sox. Kevin Youkilis, meanwhile, has four homers since the trade.

Inserting the struggling Youkilis into the lineup was hurting the team. It either forced Middlebrooks out of the lineup or caused players into unfamiliar positions like Adrian Gonzalez in right field.

Youkilis playing in those games was not putting the best lineup on the field — and with that, a deal needed to be made.

IT'S TRAINING DAY: BATTLES TO WATCH

Fantasy sports

ADAM LEVITAN
ALEVITAN@METRO.US

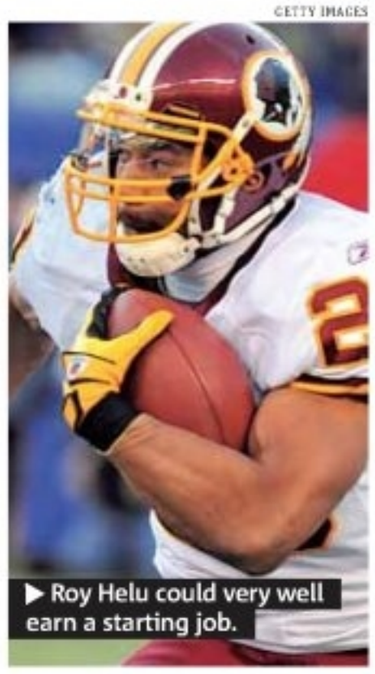
NFL news

Bum Britt

We can deal with legal trouble for Kenny Britt. We can't handle serious joint issues. Britt, who is coming off an ACL tear in his right knee, recently underwent a scope on his left knee. Owners should have a medical red flag up on draft day.

Football without pads is like jumping into the pool wearing shoes. It's just not the same.

During the last five months, we've sifted through free agency, the draft and minicamps. What we haven't seen is football players intensely banging into each other with full gear on. That will change next week as training camps open and position battles ensue. This week features a troubled star and a visit from old friend Mike Shanahan.



GETTY IMAGES

▶ Roy Helu could very well earn a starting job.

Trouble for Beast Mode

There wasn't supposed to be a battle for carries in Seattle. That all changed when an allegedly drunk Marshawn Lynch was pulled over while driving his Ford Econoline van last weekend. He's facing a lengthy suspension, leaving rookie Robert Turbin to battle Leon Washington for reps. With an intriguing size/speed skill set, Turbin is shaping up as a sleeper if he wins out.

One-cut Shanny

Shanahan has been wreaking havoc on fantasy leagues since the days of Terrell Davis, Mike Anderson and Olandis Gary. Now he's setting up a camp battle between Tim Hightower and Roy Helu for the starting gig in Washington. We know that whoever emerges is going to have plenty of success.

Green means go

Thanks to Aaron Rodgers and a dominant scheme, the Packers are among the few teams that can support three fantasy wideouts. This year, the No. 3 job is going to come down to Donald Driver, James Jones and Randall Cobb. The vets will likely get the first look, but Cobb is the one to watch.
